CHANCE OF A LIFETIME. THE TRADE IN GINSENG.

Facts About an American Product Sold In China.

DEMAND FOR IT NOW CEASED.

Uprising - Six Hundred Thousand Dollars' Worth of a Root Few Americans Ever Heard of Sent Out by Us Last Year.

"I noticed not long ago a dispatch in the newspapers from Corbin, Ky.," said a Kentuckian of pretty general inthe effect that the Chinese disturbances had interfered so seriously with product of ginseng, and, while you The doctors treat all forms of dis- may never have given the subject any are frankly and kindly told so; also in the neighborhood of $25,000,000 Americans never saw and a good many never heard of. Since 1820 we have and catarrhal deafness, also rupture, never shipped less than 46,000 pounds yearly, and shipments have reached as high as 753,000 pounds annually. These large shipments, however, occurred in the earlier history of the consulting surgeon of the institute, trade and before the supply began to diminish. Values have changed accordingly also, and the 753,717 pounds shipped in 1822 represents a value of $313,943 as against a value of $840,000 for 179,000 pounds shipped in 1897. Shipments for 1898 amounted to about 175,000 pounds, valued at $500,000, and for 1899 125,000 pounds, worth, say, $600,000, showing a continual decrease in quantity and increase in price. The Chinese disturbances, however, have knocked the trade all out of kelter, and as the demand for ginseng has ceased dealers are not buying, and the 'sang' digger is out of a job. Such a condition has never before occurred in the ginseng trade, and as it cannot continue the wise dealer will buy up the roots at the present low price and real> ize on them later. "More or less mystery has always attached to the use of ginseng by the Chinese, and, while some persons assert that it is a tonic of rare powers, the general belief is that its use is influenced rather by superstition than by science. Ginseng is supposed to be a corruption of the Chinese word 'Jenshen,' which means manwort, the root of the plant much resembling the figure of a human being. The more nearly it resembles the human form the more powerful it is considered to be, and when of extra good quality the Chinaman will balance the scales with gold for his 'sang.' Physicians and chemstudy of ginseng from a therapeutic standpoint, and they have concluded that about the only virtue the root has is the high price it will bring among the heathen Chinese, the figures ranging ordinarily from $8 to $25 a pound, the same being worth in the United States from $1.75 to $3.50 a pound, dry. Green 'sang'-that is, the fresh rootsare worth only about 40 or 50 cents a often sold in that shape. "Ginseng prevails all along the eastern sections of the United States and Canada, but it is found now only in the remoter parts, as the root needs a sandy soll in the deep woods. Kentucky and Tennessee furnish large quantities, though of an inferior grade, and I fancy that the typical 'sang' digger does not exist elsewhere as he does in these states and in West Virginia and North Carolina. Here he is at his best, and when he can scratch around all day in the cool shadows of the primeval forests and get $1 for the 'sang' he digs he is perfectly content. During the civil war the ginseng trade was disturbed by reason of the mountaineers going off to fight, and for four years the roots were left to grow in the fastnesses of the hills. That made pound to the digger, and they are not a fine crop for the returned soldier. "Some efforts have been made in various localities to cultivate ginseng. but so many difficulties are encountered that not a great deal has been done. Kentucky has several fairly successful ginseng farmers, and Professor Garman of the Kentucky agricultural experiment station at Lexington has written a bulletin on the nature and culture of ginseng which is an interesting and valuable work. Kentucky has no laws protecting the ginseng farmer, but West Virginia has, and there is also such a law in Canada, where 'sang' has been produced since 1716. There is not a state east of the Mississippi river in which some ginseng is not produced, but the bulk of it comes from the less settled or mountainous states. China raises a lot of her own 'sang,' and some comes from Japan and Russia, the Japanese using a considerable quantity themselves, but as far as statistics show the bulk of the 'sang' used in the orient comes from North America. What the results of the present disturbance in Chlna will be cannot be known for some time yet, but if 'the foreign dog' must go and China's ports be closed you may soon expect to see 'sang' schooners headed to the westward and hear stirring stories of the 'sang' smugglers, for chiefs. He hopes to be able to sell them to the British soldiers at a profit of at least 300 per cent.

STORING THE NILE'S WATERS

Dam Building at Assouan Will Create a 140 Mile Reservoir.

The great dam being constructed for he Egyptian government across the Nile at Assouan has a total length of a mile and a quarter, its height being 130 feet and its width at bottom 80 feet. It is built of granite laid in English Portland cement mortar. The object of the dam is to form a reservoir on the Nile south of Assouan and actually on the site of the First cataract, says the London Sketch.

At present during about five months in winter much more water than is required in Egypt comes down the Nile and is wasted in the Mediterranean. while during the summer months the water coming down is not sufficient for the wants of the people. When the dam is finished, all the water now wasted during winter will be stored up and given out during the summer months. The water level near Assouan will be raised in this way about 50 feet above the present low water level of the Nile, and the large reservoir then formed will extend 140 miles southward into Nubia. The water from the reservoir will pass through 160 openings in the dam, each opening being 22 feet high and 7 feet wide. These openings are fitted with steel doors, which can be closed or opened as required, so that the amount of water going through can be regulated to the exact amount necessary.

The method of building a dam such as described across a river like the Nile is a very difficult operation, as no interference with the supply of water going into Egypt can be allowed. Fortunately during the summer months, when the amount of water in the river is relatively small, the Nile passes down the cataract in five different channels. The method therefore adopted is to temporarily turn the Nile from one or two of these channels at a time and allow the whole supply to go down the remaining channels.

These diversions are made by forming temporary dams, or "sadds," in the channel, one on each side of the site of the main dam. The "sadds" are made of stone and sand or clay in bags and are of themselves large works. some of those made this year being 60 feet high and 100 feet wide at the base. They are made as water tight as possible, the water between them is pumped out, and the bottom is excavated to solid rock to allow the masonry of the dam to be started. Of course, however well these "sadds" are made, there is a large amount of leakage, and an enormous pumping plant is provided.

The total number of men employed was till recently about 10,000, but this number has been increased to some 12,000 during the last month or so.

While the practice of giving kisses to salesmen. The Onio Illuminating company, Mansheld. Onio. scholars as rewards of merit for obedience to school rules may not become a popular feature of the American public school system, the plan has worked like a charm in the case of pretty Miss Millie Daniels, a district school teacher in Nemaha county, Kan. This plan, according to a Topeka dispatch to the New York Sun, is original with Miss Daniels and was tried only after all other expedients for the luring of tru-ants to the schoolroom had failed. That the plan has been a success is at-tested by the fact that the enrollment

Miss Daniels, who is described as unusually pretty, came to Kansas two years ago fresh from the high schools of Illinois. She found her school in Nehama county in a very bad condition. The boys were hopelessly addicted to the "hookey" habit and when in school were unruly. All devices known to the teacher's art were tried to secure good behavior and attendance, but without avail. Finally the teacher announced her scheme, and it was sanctioned by the school board. The osculatory event is pulled off every Friday. The pupil who has been well behaved and attended every session of the week is allowed to kiss the teacher, while the pupil who has been absent or tardy but once is kissed by the teacher. The school board is satisfied with the workings of the plan and has re-elected Miss Daniels for another two years'

TO IMPROVE BATTLEFIELD. Two Miles Will Be Added to the Ave

nues at Gettysburg. An addition of two miles will shortly be made to the fine avenues on the Gettysburg battlefield, says the Chicago Inter Ocean. The new road will complete what is known as the Confederate avenue and will start about 400 yards west of the theological seminary, at the end of the short strip built several years ago, and will run west of south a distance of two miles along the top of the ridge to the other uncompleted end of the Confederate avenue. The avenue will follow the Confederate avenue. The avenue will follow the Confederate artillery line where during the battop of the ridge to the other uncomtle 300 guns engaged the Union artillery preceding Pickett's memorable Scattered along the avenue will be 80 guns which were used during the civil war and which will now mark the sites of the Confederate batteries. There will also be numerous tablets marking where the various corps, divisions and brigades of the Confederate army fought.

Make Patches Fashiouable. Even with the Oregon patched there are about 70,000,000 people over here who are willing to bet, says the Louisville Courier-Journal, that if she gets into a fight the other fighters will at the finish be beyond patching.
